Procedure in the event of a student death

Birkbeck operates as a collegiate community and the death of a student can have a large impact on students and the staff who work with them. The College will not seek to replicate the support offered by statutory services but will endeavour to provide help and guidance in an organised and effective manner.

When students enrol, they are required to list an emergency contact and this contact will be directed to let us know about whether a student has died by emailing: bereavement@bbk.ac.uk

Where the next of kin is referenced in this guidance, we are referring to the friends/family of the deceased who are listed as the emergency contact for the student; this may not necessarily be the official next of kin.

Purpose of the procedure

From time to time the College is faced with the sad event of a student death. The purpose of the procedure is:

1. Co-ordinating an appropriate response from the College
2. Avoiding confusion by creating clear lines of responsibility
3. Creating a clear way of reporting when a student has died
4. Mitigating institutional risk by ensuring legalities are observed, and the interests of the College are protected in cases where negligence might be alleged
5. Acting with common sense in mind
Notification of a student death

If a member of staff is informed of the death of a student off campus the following senior personnel should be contacted immediately by emailing:

bereavement@bbk.ac.uk

This email address is monitored by the following staff

• Head of Student Services (coordinating the response)
• Deputy Head of Student Services (coordinating the response)
• Student Records (who will amend the student’s record – this team will not have contact with the emergency contact/next of kin)
• BSIS (who will close the student’s record – this team will not have contact with the emergency contact/next of kin)

In these rare events, staff will be expected to undertake additional duties that are related to their regular role, for example to meet the family. The coordination role undertaken by staff from Student Services will not replace the role of staff from other professional services, faculties and schools which is vitally important in such circumstances. It may be appropriate that the coordinator acts wholly behind the scenes and support the staff who are liaising directly with the family of the deceased, for example, rather than taking on that liaison work themselves.

On-campus

If a body is discovered on campus, DO NOT touch or move anything. Inform the College Security on extension 555 and ask them to call the police.

What happens next?

Communication

It is of vital importance that only known facts are communicated in the first instance. If relevant people are identified as being required to know about the incident additional to the above list then they may be added to the contact list, however care must be taken to minimise distribution of initial information to only those that need to be aware for specific reasons. It is important that rumours and guesswork do not spread.

The notification from Student Services will contain the following basic information:

- Name of deceased
- Student ID number
- Programme and year of study
- Basic facts about the death, as appropriate.
- A hyperlink to a copy of this protocol for reference
- Name and contact details of the Head of Student Services who will act as the coordinator and the person all enquiries should be directed to.
- A request that no-one should contact the next of kin without consulting with the Head of Student Services
- Advice about how to notify students of what has happened
- A request that all press enquiries should be referred to the Head of Communications.

Informing Next of Kin

Where the College is made aware of the death of a student, and this is not by the next of kin, it is the responsibility of the police to inform the next of kin. This is normally done by a visit to their home. On no account should College staff or students make any attempt to contact next of kin until confirmation has been received that the police have informed the next of kin. The Head of Student Services should ascertain what information the police will pass on and to whom. This will be useful in subsequent contact with the next of kin and could be relevant to other agencies.

It will be appropriate for the Head of Department/Head of Student Services or any other senior member of staff who has had close involvement with the student to contact the next of kin soon after it is confirmed that they have been informed by the police, to offer sympathy and support. This will be agreed between the department and Head of Student Services.
The Head of Student Services or appointee will ascertain whether the next of kin has been informed or knows of the death before any public communications proceed.

Informing students
Informing fellow students of their colleague’s death needs to be done sensitively and quickly. This can be done either by email (suggested wording will be supplied by Student Services), by calling a special meeting, or at the end of a lecture or seminar. The Counselling Service can be present when the news is broken or they can advise on how to conduct this type of meeting. All facts, as far as they are accurately known should be made known, as should the availability of on-going support and a person to contact for further information. Another meeting may need to be called once the results of any post mortem are known.

Funeral
The responsibility for the funeral rests with the family, and their wishes take priority. Some families prefer a small private ceremony, especially in the event of tragic or suspicious circumstances, and thus it may not be possible for staff or students to attend. Alternatively, the family may be glad if representative staff and students attend, with, where possible, the assistance of the College. Sometimes it may also be advisable for a member of staff, who did not know the deceased, to accompany affected students to the funeral in order to offer support, while at other times someone who did know him/her is appreciated. It is also possible to hold a parallel event in College at the same time as the funeral for those who cannot travel or attend the funeral itself; or indeed at a later date.

Possessions
If a student has hired a locker or lived in halls of residence, belongings may need to be collected. Collection of the possessions of the deceased, including their work, will be a distressing time, particularly for the next of kin. The situation will need to be handled sensitively and with respect to the wishes of those directly involved. The Head of Student Services or their appointee will co-ordinate the handing over of a student’s possessions to the next of kin. The family may also wish to have copies of the students’ work. Where possible, this will be arranged by the Head of Student Services and the Department.

Continuing
Staff and students may continue to be affected by the death of a student for some time after the death. This may come to light in a number of ways such as exam or coursework grades. Consideration needs to be given to the impact a student’s death may have and the College should endeavour to do what it reasonably can to take this into account.
Emergency Contacts / where a death occurs outside of regular College ‘hours’

Where a member of staff is contacted about a student death out of hours, ordinarily the details of the student and the person reporting the death should be referred to the Head of Student Services and this will be followed up during business hours unless the nature of the death raises a more urgent response such as:

- The death occurs on College premises
- The nature of the death is likely to generate media interest
- The nature of the death suggests that there might be a wider risk to other members of the College community or the public (such as a death by an infectious disease).

Where the death does require a more urgent response, the details should be reported to the Malet Street reception, or by dialling 555. The staff on reception should report the death immediately to the Estates and Facilities Manager on duty, who should assess the situation and contact Managers from Student Services and/or the Communications teams as appropriate.

Review

In the weeks following a student death a review meeting may be called to bring together all staff who were close to the incident to assess if there is any learning that the College can take from the incident. The meeting is not to apportion any blame but to identify opportunities to improve the support given to students. Key findings will be circulated to the key members of staff listed in this document and where necessary, the procedure will be reviewed and amended.

Grief & Bereavement: in response to Covid-19 April 2020

Covid-19 and Bereavement

The coronavirus (covid-19) global pandemic has and will continue to result in the substantial loss of life. In all likelihood, the College community will also experience loss of life which brings the support, advice and guidance available for bereaved people and those caring for them into sharp focus.

A bereavement from covid-19 is likely to be a very challenging kind of bereavement for most people. The long-term aim is to enable the bereaved person to make the journey from grieving to remembering.

A death from covid-19 may mean that there has been or will be:
• little time to prepare for a loved one’s death following a period of illness due to covid-19;
• no time spent with a loved one before they died due to the risk of infection and social distancing rules;
• an inability to say goodbye after death due to restrictions around attending funerals, public gatherings and travel;
• isolation issues as people may be grieving while separated from family and friends who may also be grieving but in other locations;
• practical challenges, for example if the person bereaved was previously receiving care from someone who has died and/or they have responsibilities to care for others or have ongoing work or family responsibilities;
• issues around coping with a shocking bereavement at a time when the bereaved person, or others in their circle of family and friends, may also be ill with covid-19.

Staff can signpost bereaved people and those caring for bereaved people to appropriate support and help which is free and easily accessible. It is important that people access these services in their own time and are not encouraged to rush through the grieving process.

Quick Advice
Bereavement sometimes also referred to as grief, is a term used to describe the sense of loss felt when someone close to us or who we care about dies. It can be difficult and stressful and nearly everybody goes through it at some point in their lives.

This sense of loss may contain a range of emotions, such as sadness, anger, guilt, frustration and anxiety. Everyone experiences grief differently and there is no 'normal' or 'right' way to grieve. How we react will be influenced by many different things, including our age and personality, our cultural background and religious beliefs, our previous experiences of bereavement, our circumstances and how we cope with loss.

The College is committed to providing support, advice and guidance to students who are experiencing bereavement and loss.

Below are a range of support options.

It may be that students would like to make a start by speaking to someone at the College or perhaps feel they would like to join an online support group or call a helpline or begin some bereavement counselling.

It may be however that students would like some help in working out where to start. Experiencing bereavement is often confusing and disorientating and students may experience a mixture of emotions that can be overwhelming. We may not in reality have a good sense of where to begin.
Birkbeck Services

- Birkbeck Student Counselling Service: They can provide listening and compassionate support to students and signpost to mental health support, services and charities outside the College, and to online resources.
- Chaplaincy:
  - The College has published a special webpage for students following the impact of coronavirus on teaching and learning intended to keep everyone updated on the evolving situation.

Helplines

There are various national helplines who will be able to give free and quick advice and support:
