BIRKBECK LAW PRESS was launched in 2003 as an imprint of Birkbeck School of Law and Cavendish Publishing, then one of the UK's leading independent law publishers, since incorporated into Routledge. Birkbeck Law School has been recognised as an international centre of research excellence, specialising in legal theory and theoretically informed socio-legal research and pioneering critical approaches to scholarship.

AIMS

Birkbeck Law Press aims to develop a distinct publishing profile by addressing the legal challenges of late modernity. Globalisation and the move towards universal legal values, which should respect, however, cultural specificities and local conditions, have created the urgent need for greater dialogue and understanding between the major schools of thought and legal systems in the world. Most legal publishing, driven by the needs of specialisation and the state-based nature of positive law, has not addressed systematically these concerns.

Birkbeck Law Press aims to publish scholarly monographs and edited collections of essays, which develop critical and reflexive perspectives on legal theory and research and to promote the dialogue between the various approaches to legal scholarship and education. The Press aims to publish books which promote the principles of justice and equity and which are responsive to the different legal traditions and cultures of the world.

AREAS OF INTEREST

Birkbeck Law Press invites the submission of book proposals and manuscripts from scholars in all parts of the world. The Press will consider books in all areas of legal theory and theoretically informed socio-legal studies. More specifically, we invite book proposals in the areas of:

- law and philosophy
- law, literature and culture
- law, post colonialism and critical race theory
- law and development
- psychoanalytical jurisprudence
- critical legal theories and histories
- law, gender and sexualities
- law and political economy

The Press also welcomes critical and comparative treatises on any substantive area of law. A small fund will be made available for the translation into English of works in foreign languages that meet the general publications criteria of the Birkbeck Law Press.
CURRENTLY IN PRESS
Maria Aristodemou, Fiona Macmillan and Patricia Tuitt (Eds), Crime Fiction and the Law (forthcoming December 2014)
Stephen Connelly, Spinoza: right and absolute freedom (Forthcoming January 2015)
Bethania Assy, Injustice - A Time Out of Joint

HOW TO SUBMIT A BOOK PROPOSAL
Book proposals should be submitted to Professor Costas Douzinas via our book proposal form, which can be downloaded in pdf format from the Birkbeck Law Press webpage, or requested from either Valerie Kelley at v.kelley@bbk.ac.uk or Colin Perrin at Colin.Perrin@informa.com.

Proposals for consideration by the Editorial Board should contain:
- A synopsis setting out the purpose of the book, its themes and objectives and a summary of the approach to be taken.
- A list of chapters, including an indication of the contents of each chapter.
- An indication of the intended audience: is it intended for use on taught undergraduate or postgraduate courses, is it a research monograph, will it appeal to an inter-disciplinary audience, will it attract an international readership?
- Information about existing books on the subject and how the proposed book develops, or differs from the contribution made by other books.
- Suggested completion date and indication of the likely length of the book.
- The author's c.v., including details of previous publications.

The Editorial Board may also ask to see sample chapters and, where available, the manuscript.

EVALUATION PROCESS
Proposal will initially be considered by the Editorial Board. The Board may then ask specialists in the subject to give independent advice on the content, quality, and potential market for the proposed book before reaching a decision whether to issue a contract. The Board and independent reviewers observe strict rules of confidentiality; its views and those of the anonymous reviewers will be communicated to the author.

WHERE TO SEND YOUR PROPOSAL
All completed book proposals should be sent to the Editorial Board, Birkbeck Law Press, School of Law, Birkbeck, Malet Street, London WC1E 7HX, UK, or emailed to Professor Costas Douzinas at c.douzinas@bbk.ac.uk.
