Programme Specification

The MA in Cultural and Critical Studies explores cultural debates across the disciplines and through the examination of work in a range of media - for example, literature, print culture, painting, film, photography, music, digital formats. The course is designed to provide grounding in the theoretical debates that inform contemporary investigations in a number of areas such as modernity, identity, subjectivity, ethnicity, technology, aesthetics, the everyday and cultural history, fetishism and reification, and global cultures. A flexible modular scheme of option courses and independent research allows students to work on themes and problems in past and present media and cultural thought. The insights and analyses of twentieth and twenty-first century forms of critique – Idealist aesthetics, Marxism, critical theory, psychoanalysis, deconstruction, speculative realism, technocultural theories and ideological and political critique - are employed in relation to cultural artefacts and events. The course engages with new technologies, disparate cultural forms and the modes of enquiry that have recently transformed the traditional disciplines. It studies themes such as neoliberalism, intersectionality, post-humanism, the social construction of space, visual perception and technologies of the gaze, the politics of sexuality, the 'everyday', the organisation of knowledge, questions of high and low culture, new materialism and the object, sensory perception, the notion of tradition and cultural production and reproduction.

Students are exposed to a broad range of topics and approaches and are mentored in researching their own particular projects in response to the modules.

Entry Criteria

Students are normally expected to have a good honours degree normally second class or above in a relevant subject - for example, English, History, Philosophy, Visual Culture, Media Studies, or an interdisciplinary programme with a strong Humanities or Arts component. We operate also a policy of providing places to those with non-standard entry qualifications, and candidates with other kinds of experience or professional training if good grounds are given at interview and in the application. Given the nature of the material we study, we require that students for whom English is not a first language have an IELTS of 7.
Learning Outcomes

To gain the qualification the learner will have demonstrated the following skills specified in the learning outcomes for approved modules in the programme and for the programme as a whole:

Subject Specific
1. Exposure to late 19th, 20th and 21st century cultural and critical theory
2. Ability to digest sophisticated theoretical texts and apply their findings to original examples
3. An understanding of the historical context in which intellectual ideas develop
4. Ability to structure an understanding of various cultures and societies in the context of prevailing theoretical debates, thus reiterating the arrangement of theory and local knowledge

Intellectual
5. Ability to apply theoretical materials to self-chosen examples
6. The ability to read texts closely and critically and to fathom arguments in close co-ordination with practice and experience
7. The ability to consider a certain topic from a variety of viewpoints and to evaluate which of these is most appropriate for particular topics
8. Engagement with questions of communicating difficult ideas to an audience of peers

Practical
9. To improve skills of expression in writing and also discussion and presentation skills
10. To enhance bibliographic research skills
11. Where appropriate to enhance and devise modes of data gathering (in interviews or via other types of primary research such as archival work.)

Personal and Social
12. To encounter a range of students from different disciplinary and cultural backgrounds
13. To conduct discussion and listen to others’ opinions in a productive manner
14. The ability to work independently
15. The opportunity to work as part of a group
16. The development of confidence in expressing opinions and the cultivation of the ability to listen

Learning, teaching and assessment methods

The programme is taught through a combination of lectures, seminars, individual tutorials, workshops, VLE exercises, posts and polls and small group discussions and project presentations. These various forms allow for a fully-rounded educational experience. Engagement with online learning environments increases access to the programme materials and encourages programme engagement outside of the classroom. The variety of materials examined – written, visual, sonic etc – allow for the multifaceted engagement with cultural forms and a reflection on whether and how the medium shapes the message. Such questions are followed up specifically in study skills sessions.

- Participation is encouraged by small group teaching and workshop formats, as well as in the project evenings in the Summer term, where students are encouraged to presents work to the rest of the class and to comment on the work of their peers in constructive ways.
- A compulsory but unweighted exercise run through the VLE gives students input into the curriculum and greater ownership of the programme by allowing them to suggest and vote on readings for the final session of term.
The teaching and learning methods encourage personal development of students because work such as essay work and project work can be directed by the students’ own interests and individual tutorials enable the students to relate their ideas cogently to the theoretical subject matter of the programme.

Students write longer and shorter essays, as well as a short critical bibliography. They also present for 20 minutes and learn how to communicate ideas orally in an effective manner, much as one might do in a teaching role.

Programme Description

Over the course of the degree the students complete:

- A two-term Core course, ‘Key Concepts in Critical and Cultural Studies’
- Two 10-week Options courses, or equivalent
- A Summer term set of activities, which include project presentations by students.
- A Dissertation – 15,000 words

Full-time students complete the degree in one year as follows:

- Autumn Core I & II
- Spring Two Options
- Summer Project Presentation and Dissertation

Part-time students carry this over a two-year period as follows:

- 1st year Autumn Core
- Spring Option
- Summer Project Presentations
- 2nd year Autumn Core
- Spring Option
- Summer Project presentations and Dissertation

Most teaching is by seminar. The emphasis is on discussion, debate and the sharing and exploration of ideas. Core Course seminars take place on Monday evenings, 6.00–7.30 pm and (for full-time or second year part-time students) Thursday evenings, 6.00–7.30 pm, in the Autumn Term. These are followed by less formal sessions – which we call ‘Second Half sessions’ – on Mondays at 7.40–9.00 pm. Year One and Year Two students are strongly encouraged to attend these sessions. These sessions are enhanced by a Student-led MA Cultural and Critical Studies Reading Group.

On Wednesdays for the first four weeks of the summer term we run a series of dissertation workshops, in conjunction with the MA Modern and Contemporary and Contemporary Literature and Culture. A small cluster of free-form classes is also run in the summer term. These are optional classes, but they are a chance for students to come to an agreement about an extra area of study they want to pursue through a series of staff-led lectures/seminars. MA convenors for the MA Cultural Critical, Modern and Contemporary MAs gather suggestions from students in Week 1 of summer term (25 April), then set a small amount of reading for the lectures in week 7, 8, 9. Staff leading the seminars will depend on the topics chosen.

There are also a number of study skills workshops throughout the year, especially pertaining to dissertation preparation and research.

Assessment

Autumn Term

Student Attendance Framework – in brief

Principle

Consistent and regular student attendance in class (or equivalent) promotes and affords student success. Inconsistent and irregular attendance is less likely to result in student success and is consistent with lower marks and degree classifications being achieved and awarded.

Attendance expectation

Birkbeck, University of London expects you to consistently attend all timetabled sessions, including lectures, seminars, group and individual tutorials, learning support sessions, workshops, laboratories, field trips, inductions and demonstrations.

E-Registers

All Birkbeck students are issued with student cards. Students are expected to take them to classes and to assessment venues and to present them to a member of staff if requested. This is for the purpose of identifying Birkbeck students.

Student Support and Guidance

All Birkbeck students have access to a range of student support services, details can be found on our website here: http://www.bbk.ac.uk/mybirkbeck/services/facilities

Methods of Enhancing Quality and Standards

The College has rigorous procedures in place for the monitoring and enhancing its educational provision. This includes regular monitoring of programmes drawing on feedback from various sources including external examiner’s reports, student feedback, student achievement and progression data. In addition, departments are reviewed every four to five years through the internal review process that includes external input.
