Learning, teaching and assessment methods

The teaching strategy is designed to meet the needs of mature students in full time employment and to make maximum use of the limited time available to them and is provided by:

1. A programme of evening lectures and seminars for each course;
2. Careful design of workload and its distribution across academic terms
3. A variety of assessment methods
4. A comprehensive postgraduate handbook to guide and support independent learning.

In all modules, lectures provide an overview of issues relevant to the subject being studied. Seminars follow that allow students to explore issues in more depth. Learning outcomes are defined for all courses each week and are detailed in the module outlines which identify the aims and objectives of the module, the module schedule, weekly readings and learning outcomes, contact details for staff.
and essential information about assessment. Further materials are distributed in class from time to time and guidance on dissertations, revision and exam technique take place throughout the year.

The formal mechanisms of teaching and learning include a combination of lectures, directed readings, seminar discussions, classes (for practical skill) and supervised coursework projects in the case of course modules and close supervision in independent research. These ensure that the aims and learning outcomes are both clearly understood and effectively achieved by both academic members of staff and students.

The assessment takes the form of a combination of a two hours exam and a coursework assignment.

Programme Description

The degree consists of eight modules (totalling 120 credits) and a 12,000-word dissertation (worth 60 credits). You take six compulsory modules, and two option modules.

Student Attendance Framework – in brief

The full version of the ‘Student Attendance Framework’ is available http://www.bbk.ac.uk/mybirkbeck/services/rules/Attendance-Framework.pdf
Principle
Consistent and regular student attendance in class (or equivalent) promotes and affords student success. Inconsistent and irregular attendance is less likely to result in student success and is consistent with lower marks and degree classifications being achieved and awarded.

Attendance expectation
Birkbeck, University of London expects you to consistently attend all timetabled sessions, including lectures, seminars, group and individual tutorials, learning support sessions, workshops, laboratories, field trips, inductions and demonstrations.

E-Registers
All Birkbeck students are issued with student cards. Students are expected to take them to classes and to assessment venues and to present them to a member of staff if requested. This is for the purpose of identifying Birkbeck students.
study and training, working abroad, vacation jobs is displayed on School notice boards, web pages and Moodle (see: http://www.careers.lon.ac.uk/output/Page358.asp).

Personal Development Planning opportunities have been introduced for all Birkbeck undergraduate students and the locus and provision of both this and other services such as study skills, academic English provision, counselling and advisory centre, is co-ordinated by the Centre for Learning and Professional Development (CLPD) located in the new foyer space in the Malet Street building. The Centre works with central and School-based learning support officers to support Schools in providing student learning support and coordinates that provided by the Library, ITS and the Students’ Union (see: http://www.clpd.bbk.ac.uk/).

Programme-specific support and guidance arrangements:

In addition to the system-wide provision of student support and guidance arrangements at the College level outlined above, the Department of Management and the School of Business, Economics and Informatics have a firm commitment to the academic and pastoral support of every student so that the aims and learning outcomes of all their programmes are effectively achieved. This includes a careful consideration of the application process, the provision of induction sessions throughout the first year of the programme for new students, the assignment of a Personal Tutor to every student in the programme, the process of continuous assessment, and the monitoring of academic progression by improving upon our current system of compiling progress files for each student. In addition, the School has a dedicated Learning Co-ordinator whose role is to support students in their studies and offer help and advice on a wide range of study skills.

The admissions process determines an applicant’s potential to cope with, and benefit from, the programme. This provides an opportunity to ensure that recruited students’ abilities are consistent with the demands of the programme. All newly admitted students attend an Induction Evening organised by the Department, which takes place annually prior to the start of the academic year. The Induction Evening acquaints all new students by a number of orientation talks provided by representatives from Central Computing Services, the Library, the Students' Union, and the Disability Co-ordinator. Later in the first term of the first year, students are given an induction and tour of the library facilities in smaller groups. The Induction Evening also provides the opportunity to introduce all new students to relevant administrative, teaching and learning support staff providing academic and pastoral support, broadly defined. In this manner, students are aware right at the start that there are academic tutorial support and guidance systems in place to ensure their academic and personal development.

Students are encouraged to contact their Personal Tutor where appropriate, should they have any query regarding their progression in their programme of study. There are also other support mechanisms in place for supporting and monitoring student progression. For example, the Postgraduate Administrative team monitors attendance in class by means of attendance registers. Students regularly missing classes are contacted to offer support with any current difficulties they may be encountering. The Postgraduate Office also regularly e-mails all students with programme- and module-specific information; and the website contains further relevant information and resources.
In addition to these procedures and resources to support and monitor student progression, students are encouraged to make use of their student representatives regarding specific issues relating to their programmes of study. These representatives report to members of the academic and administrative staff at student-staff liaison meetings, conducted each term. In response to student feedback, relevant changes are made where necessary and students are informed of these changes wither by e-mail, the website or through their student representatives.

The curriculum of the programme, with five compulsory modules, enables the close interaction of students in each year of the programme and helps to build the peer group bonds that make for effective mutual support.
