14	Programme Rationale & Aims
	The postgraduate Arts Policy and Management programme incorporates a unique combination of 'professional development' and theoretical exploration, policy and management theory, cultural theory and planning. Students are provided with a solid basis concerning the entire sector via one core module: Understanding Arts Policy and Management, which engages with the historical and contemporary policy framework and practice in the UK, Europe and elsewhere and looks in-depth at the working practices among organisations in the arts sector. The MA programme offers specialist education in the following areas: Audiences, Curating, Digital Culture, Performing Arts, and Comparative Cultural Policies. All students choose from a variety of option modules that are most relevant to them and undertake modules specifically designed to provide a strong theoretical and professional focus. The main aims of the programme are to provide students with: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - An overview of conceptual and practical management, policy structures and systems in professional, third sector arts/ cultural organisations, paying some heed to the commercial arts sector (especially as it relates to the non-profit sector) - A historical overview of the growth of non-profit arts management, principally in the UK in Europe and beyond, and the current socio-political and economic context

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - An opportunity to examine the impact of structure and process on organisational effectiveness and to discuss significant trends in the arts and the management of the arts - An opportunity to examine theoretical context and professional practices as well as career trends in the cultural sector - Opportunities for acquiring and developing research skills - A clearly-structured modular curriculum in arts policy and management - An opportunity for the analysis of major trends and current debate in the field
