14	Programme Rationale and Aims
	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Offers a structured programme of courses which provide a sound training in the discipline of History of Art • Enables students to increase their knowledge of the history of Western art • Offers students the opportunity to develop a range of transferable skills • Offers a broad range of learning experiences • Provides relevant courses for those working, or seeking to work, in the visual arts, and offers opportunities to develop subject-specific skills • Provides intellectual stimulus and challenges for those studying for personal development • Promotes creative, critical engagement with the institutional, historical, social, economic and political contexts of arts organisations • Enables students to develop the skills necessary to conceive, produce and/or curate an arts project.

15	Entry Criteria
	UCAS entry (3 year, full-time): the UCAS tariff is currently 112. The UCAS tariff score is applicable to students who have recently studied a qualification that has a UCAS tariff equivalence. Students with work experience may be admitted under the mature student regulations. Birkbeck welcomes applicants without traditional entry qualifications, as we base decisions on our own assessment of qualifications, knowledge and previous work experience.

	Part-time pathway (4 year, 6 year): standard requirements are a minimum of two ‘A’ Levels or equivalent. Students with work experience may be admitted under the mature student regulations. For the part-time pathway, admission is based on interview and a written exercise, in which candidates are invited to comment on a pair of paintings in the National Gallery chosen from a short list. Students who complete Birkbeck’s Certificate of Higher Education in History of Art are guaranteed a place on either the full-time or part-time BA, with the offer of exemption from the first-year modules. Applicants in this position do not need to provide an admissions exercise.

17	Learning, teaching and assessment methods Learning and Teaching <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The main teaching method for Level 4 is the lecture to the whole year group, supported by smaller seminars, tutorials, workshops and blended learning. On ‘Art History: A Survey’, the lectures are supplemented by seminars in smaller groups every third week to encourage engagement with the themes of the lectures through discussion. ‘Debates in Art History’ uses a combination of lectures and small-group seminars; ‘Material and Process in Art’ uses lectures and staff-led field trips; ‘Doing Art History’ is taught through a combination of class talks and demonstrations, workshops, seminars and blended learning activities using moodle.

‘Visual Art: Histories, Networks and Organisations’ provides students with an overview of the working practices in the visual arts sector so as to allow them to develop a creative, enquiring and analytical approach to the issues involved in the presentation of the visual arts. It is designed as an introduction to the contemporary visual arts scene, curating and visual arts institutions. By examining contemporary case studies and historical examples, students consider how art is displayed, distributed and discussed. Students have the opportunity to explore their own ideas and interests in workshops, and are encouraged to reflect on their own personal and professional development. The module also contains a site visit and a ‘spontaneous’ curating workshop while each student will also present a comparative case study in class.

- At Level 5, lectures remain the principal teaching method for the History of Art option modules ‘Art and Society in the Middle Ages and Renaissance’, ‘Art and Society in the Nineteenth Century’ and ‘Art and Society in the Twentieth Century’ but smaller group sizes facilitate growing student participation. Classes are supported by directed visits to galleries and museums, which the students do in small groups in their own time.
- ‘Curating Culture’ examines prevalent forms of organising, programming and curating within the arts and cultural sectors, to create awareness of the curatorial logics of current exhibitions and events. Students will consider the types of narrative, connection and meaning that are created through curatorial practice and consider how these, in turn, produce and engage different audiences. Drawing on this understanding, students will create their own curatorial proposal for an exhibition or event that critically and creatively engages with their chosen field of practice. Through discussions, talks, and workshops students will consider the interrelationship of the what, when, where, how and, most, importantly, why of a curatorial proposition.
- At Level 6 all teaching on taught option modules is conducted in small-group seminars. Student presentations are introduced and set texts are often used to structure seminar discussion. The focus on participation in progressively smaller groups aims to encourage and support engagement and independence.

Assessment

All taught modules, with the exception of ‘Debates in Art History’, ‘Visual Art: Histories, Networks and Organisations’ and ‘Curating Culture’ are assessed by means of a combination of coursework essays and examinations.

- At Level 4, ‘Art History: A Survey’ and ‘Doing Art History’ require essays of various lengths. The essays at this level are relatively short and purely formative, allowing students to settle in to academic writing in the discipline. ‘Doing Art History’ also requires a field report and visual analysis exercise, and ‘Art History: A Survey’ involves an unseen examination in the summer term. ‘Debates in Art History’ is assessed by means of an unseen examination in the summer term and a course journal completed during the year and submitted in the summer, which documents the student’s engagement with the issues raised. ‘Visual Art: Histories, Networks and Organisations’ is assessed by means of a case study (50%) and an essay (50%).
- At Level 5 the pattern is two longer essays per module, submitted around the end of the autumn and spring terms, and an unseen examination in the summer term, all of which contribute to the formal assessment. The essays and examination each contribute half of the module mark. ‘Curating Culture’ students are assessed via a 4,000 word project proposal. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • At Level 6 the assessment of the option modules continues the pattern of two essays and unseen examination but the balance of assessment shifts so that the essays constitute a higher proportion of the overall module mark. This structure is intended to foster and acknowledge students’ increasing independence as they progress through the different levels of the degree. • A Level 5 ‘Research Portfolio’ module is completed in the penultimate year. It consists of a portfolio of work, including a critical bibliography and literature review, which will lead into work on the dissertation, and provide effective progression from skills training provided at level 4. • The culmination of the programme is the Level 6 ‘Dissertation’ module, which is completed in the final year. The student defines and researches a topic of their own choosing under the supervision of a member of teaching staff.

18	Programme Description Are you interested in a career in galleries and museums, arts policy and education, or in the broader cultural and heritage sectors? On our BA History of Art with Curating you will learn to research the social and historical contexts in which visual art has been produced, and write confidently and analytically about texts and images. At the same time, you will be introduced to current curatorial approaches and debates, and given opportunities to put your knowledge and ideas into practice in a supportive and collaborative environment. Please refer to section 20 below for full programme structure details.
